

Catherine Cobb Safe House

Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault Advocacy Program

The first domestic violence program in Lenawee County began through Call Someone Concerned, Inc. in the early 1970's. In 1978, after receiving countless desperate cries for help from women in violent relationships, a program director was hired to develop and provide services specific to victims of domestic violence. Initial funding for this program came through the Michigan Domestic Violence Prevention and Treatment Board.

The need for intensive services continued to grow beyond existing resources. In 1983, a grant was presented by the City of Adrian to purchase and renovate a facility where more families could be sheltered and all domestic violence services could be consolidated into one place. In 1984, with great vision, the facility officially became known as the Catherine Cobb Domestic Violence Shelter. In 2003, a renovation and addition to the building was completed, doubling the number of survivors able to seek shelter.

The Catherine Cobb Safe House offers a compassionate and supportive atmosphere for growth and change for survivors.

Gaining an understanding of the impacts of domestic violence and sexual assault is a healthy step towards healing.
